Report

Saraswati Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences organized a guest lecture on the topic “Pharm D. Research: From Project Design to Successful Execution” with the objective of enhancing students’ knowledge about practice-based research, how to select project, design of project work and its importance in pharmacy education.

Dr. Gaurang Shah provided a comprehensive overview of Pharm D. research and its role in improving patient care outcomes. Key topics discussed included research topic selection, literature review, study design, formulation of objectives, ethical approval, data collection and preparation of the final research report as per PCI guidelines. The speaker also highlighted common mistakes in research and shared practical tips for successful project execution.

The session was interactive and students actively participated by asking questions related to research methodology and project planning. The expert addressed the queries effectively, making the session informative and engaging.

Overall, the guest lecture was beneficial for students and helped them gain clarity and confidence in conducting Pharm D. research projects.
